

Karen Ross is Professor of Gender and Media in the School of Arts and Cultures, Newcastle University. Her teaching and research are focused on issues of gender, media and society including aspects of social media, public and political communication, and the wider diversity and inclusion agenda. She has held visiting positions at a range of universities, most recently as a Distinguished Visitor at the University of Alberta in 2015. She was the Lead Researcher and Project Coordinator on a pan-European project, funded by the European Institute for Gender Equality (EU NGO), focused on identifying issues in relation to both the promotion and representation of women across the European media sector. She has previously carried out projects for the BBC and the independent TV sector on aspects of diversity in programming including ethnicity, disability and age and on niche audience responses to audiovisual content.
